

IG 3 Vision: Jonathan and Jocelyne

CCF this year is in a very unique and somewhat precarious situation. The fellowship faces two paths. The first path is continued relevance, survival, and perseverance past the COVID-19 Pandemic, a continually thriving community of intentional Christian brotherhood and sisterhood.

However, there also lies a second path: existential irrelevance, and a quick, sudden demise (literally). This year will be a test of leadership at all levels and the fellowship's collective ability to instill the values of leadership and Christian community into the lower years of CCF. The incoming lower years (1st and 2nd) for the most part do not have the positive experiences that upper years had before COVID and online class, and thus will not feel that communal investment in themselves that they can then invest in others.

These lower years are the backbone of the fellowship and thus are also the future of the fellowship. Without them, there can be no more fellowship, since not enough of them will be able to step up to the mantle of leadership and continue on the existing legacy of CCF.

CCF plays a crucial role in the spiritual life on campus and those who participate. It is literally (along with other campus fellowships) the embodiment of Christ's body at U of T. It is a place where people are able to re-connect with their faith, embolden one another, and keep each other accountable and intentional. It is a vessel where God's will can be exerted in this university and in this city.

"And let us consider how to stir up one another to love and good works, not neglecting to meet together, as is the habit of some, but encouraging one another, and all the more as you see the Day drawing near." - Hebrews 10:24-25

In order to fulfill this vision for the year

- Messaging people directly
- Asking for prayer requests
- Study dates
- Christmas market
- Encouraging each other to attend ccf events
- Encouraging each other to get plugged into a local church community
- Encouraging each other with personal devotions